Biography

After playing defensive end at Carnegie Mellon University, I learned how to long snap to pursue playing professional football. This led to a professional playing career playing for the San Diego Strike Force in the IFL, being signed by the Baltimore Ravens, playing preseason with the New England Patriots, and playing full seasons for the DC Defenders and Houston Roughnecks in the XFL.

During my time as a player, I was a student of the game; seeking out instruction from pros and studying others' film. This formed my belief in that self film study is key for consistency as a player as well as great training, nutrition, and recovery habits. I believe these habits are necessary for players to compete and improve day in and day out.

As I transition into coaching, I am looking to grow as a coach by gaining experience with schemes and gameplanning,
